Beyond Expected in Writing

More able children in writing can....

- Use their knowledge of authors, books and genres to enhance their own writing styles and expand their writing 'toolkit'.
- To use their own experience with both writing and reading to construct writing that is fluent, engaging and thoughtful to the reader.
- To use a wide variety of language to instil different reactions from the reader.
- To take all of their prior knowledge, synthesize it to make connections to other learning and be able to apply it to their writing in a variety of ways.
- To have a greater understanding of the skills required to write in different genres and be able to do this independently without prompting etc.
